Architectural Studies
July 17 – July 28                1:00pm – 4:00pm

Instructors: Matthew Fujimoto and Meganne DesRosier

The study of architecture is an exciting multidisciplinary field that synthesizes design investigation with historical and cultural perspectives, social responsibilities, technical excellence, and leadership. Architectural Studies will introduce you to these ideas through a sequence of architectural design prompts. It will provide an opportunity to test the fit of architecture with your future aspirations. Students will investigate design issues through the traditional processes of model making and drawing while also being introduced to the latest software tools used in the architecture industry. Students will develop both visual representation and verbal presentation skills. There may also be off-campus field trips. This course will end with a presentation of student work to guests from the UW Department of Architecture and Seattle design community.  There are no prerequisite skills required for this class - just interest and enthusiasm!

What to expect: Instructors reserve the right to make modifications based on student need, available resources, and scheduling

✓    Take on a college-level design challenge
✓    Develop design-related vocabulary and thinking
✓    Present designs for peer reviews and critiques
✓    Introduction to industry-related software and technology
✓    Guest speakers and panels

Technology & Materials: We will provide the basic supplies, tools, and technology students will need for this course. Students are welcome to bring laptops or other devices with downloaded software as long as they take responsibility for personal property.

What we expect from participants:

✓    Arrives to class ready to participate fully ✓    Works collaboratively in peer groups & follows behavior guidelines
✓    Open to new experiences and unfamiliar skill or content
✓    Asks questions, seeks feedback, and expresses concerns to the instructor

SYP Refund Policy: To withdraw from a program, email sypdrop@uw.edu before the refund deadline of June 21 and provide the student's name, registration ID and the name of the program you are dropping.  For refund policies and deadlines, please visit our website and select "register online" for the Registration page.